What Lansing High School Should Mean to Its Graduates

Chas. E. LeFurge

High School days are ended for the class of 1923 and very soon will be for the class of January 1924. After the presentation of diplomas on commencement night, the curtain will be rung down upon the last act of a four year performance, the equal of which it will never be your pleasure to know in your life again, however varied it may be and with whatever rich and pleasurable experiences it may be filled throughout the future years.

It is well to consider at this time what the privilege of attending high school until you have successfully completed a high school course of study means to you now and in the years to come. Many of you will continue your education in school through attendance at college while many others will permanently discontinue your school associations so far as attendance is concerned. However, in whichever class you are destined to be, Lansing High School has so functioned as to place you in a strategic position for the attainment of an influential life in the work of the world, and no one of you, I take it, does not aspire to so work and live that he may to the best of his ability contribute to the task of conserving, preserving and advancing the intellectual, moral and spiritual legacies of the ages. The world is now realizing as it never has before the vast importance of educated leadership and the absolute necessity of intelligent citizenship as a safe foundation for democracy. It is not so much the knowledge which you have accumulated that will enable you to take your place among the leaders as it is the ability to think, coupled with high ideals and lofty character, which Lansing High School has shriven to nurture and develop. You have received inspiration from your contact with teachers and classmates which will lead you each in your own sphere to carry on for your own advancement and that of the world to an extent entirely impossible for one who has not had such an educational advantage as graduation from Lansing High represents.

All has not been pleasure; there has been a mixture of bitter with the sweet but all in all you have had a very enjoyable time during your high school training. You have had many social advantages and everyone of you has made some friendships which will be the sweetest and at the same time the most enduring of any you will ever make.

You have gloried in the successes which your high school has achieved in athletics and debate and have helped to maintain a true spirit of good sportsmanship when it has been the lot of your school to meet defeat. You have been patriotic to your school and, if L. H. S. means what I believe it does to you, you will carry that spirit with you always, and will ever be proud to say that you are a graduate of Lansing High School.

To sum up then, Lansing High School should mean to its graduates opportunity for success and service because of the development of intellectuality, morality and character, and inspiration for the same, which it has been your privilege to acquire. It means also a period in your life when much fun and much seriousness were happily interspersed and lifelong friendships formed. I am sure that your appreciation will grow with the years and that you will always point with pride to L. H. S.

Dear Lansing High

Words by Evangeline Lutes

Music by Wallace Bennett

Senior "A" Class Song

Dear L. H. S. we're leaving you.
A friend we've found both tried and true.
Your walls have sheltered us four years.
And friendly echoes reached our ears.
We tried our very best to do
What most would honor the orange and blue
It's the only class for you and me
The dear old class of '23.

And now the race is nearly run,
We've mingled all our work with fun.
Altho we did not always win,
Our colors said "do not give in."
For the orange and blue, our glorious flag,
Would never let our courage lag.
And now we go the world to see,
The dear old Class of '23.

Old L. H. S. is passing a milestone. The June class is leading her. We are marching with flying banners, roaring drums and shrieking fifes. We, the class of June, have carried our Alma Mater past her fiftieth milestone. We are the fiftieth class to graduate, the fiftieth to file out from her protecting walls into the fresh clear air of June.

For fifty years men and women have gone forth from her portals, prepared to meet life's battles. She has built, for the most part, strong men. Men who feared evil, who respected government, and principles. Her men had rather die than bring dishonor home. They had rather meet defeat than gain unmerited victory.

When the June 1923 class—the semi-centennial class—receives its diplomas, the alumni of Lansing High School will muster full 3,000 strong. The first class numbered but three. The January and June, 1923, classes together number exactly 300. The total number of graduates for the first twenty years was 188, barely more than the number graduating this June. The next twenty years, 1893 to 1913 saw 1050 join the ranks, while the last ten years have added 1762 to the roll.

These few figures reflect strikingly the growth of our city and school, as well as the increased insistence upon a high school education by the community at large.

May the fair name and good fame of our Alma Mater spread farther and with ever better reason, keeping pace in the next half century, not only with the increasing numbers, but also with the greater opportunities presented to the oncoming generations.

WITH THE ASSISTANCE OF STAR.

FIRST PRIZE

By Miner Ketchum

It was a dismal night. A cold wind swept over the plains and switched the tent flaps as though it meant to tear them into shreds. Above the sound of the wind could be heard the steady beat of rain on the roof over head.

The occupants of this tent were three representatives of the old west:—the west of the days of the cattle rustlers, the stage coach, the sheep and cattle feuds, the Indian fights and the famous lone bandits known as "two gun" men.

It had been hard for these three to see the old west give way to the new. Hard especially for Jim Brummel who was otherwise known as "Bow" Brummel because of his fitting love for a horse's back.

It being nearly time for him to herd, he started to get dressed. As he straightened up in his cot he struck his head on the heel of his boot which hung above his pillow where he had tied it the night before so that it would not get full of water during the storm. In his excitement he put his feet down where the ground should have been but where, just now, stood a large puddle of water. His next act was the most natural, under the circumstances, for him to do. He rather forcibly cursed.

After he had dressed he unrolled his slicker which had been serving as a pillow, enveloped himself in its clammy folds, and stepped out into the drizzling rain where he was soon joined by another victim of stern duty.

There was a moon above the heavy clouds, but it might as well have been on the other side of the earth for all the assistance it gave in the operation of saddling two of the picketed horses. The herd lay to the north of the camp, so settling reluctantly into their soggy saddles the drowsy riders turned their horses in that direction, trusting to the instinct of the animals to find the cattle.

The darkness was intense, and the wiry little beasts were obliged to pick their way cautiously over the rough ground lying between the camp and the spot where the herd had been bedded down for the night.

Presently the sound of a dismal voice tunelessly raised in a dismal, minor melody came faintly to their ears, and as they neared the singer they became aware that he was entreating the public to "take him to the grave-yard, and place a sod o'er him," varying the monotony of this request by begging some one to "bury him on the lone prairie."

Approaching carefully to avoid startling the cattle, the two riders separated, and relieving the tired watchers, commenced their dreary three hours vigil, on opposite sides of the herd. The cattle were unusually quiet, needing little attention, and "Bow" had plenty of time to reflect on his present life and the life he might have led.

The rain dripped from the limp brim of his sombrero and ran in little streams from the skirts of his oil skin coat into his already soaking boots. The chill wind swept down from the mountains, pierced his damp clothes, and made him shiver in the saddle.

He pulled down the dripping brim of his sombrero to shelter his face from the stinging wind and started singing one of the saddest songs he knew. He wondered why cow-boys invariably chose such gloomy themes for their songs and then set them to the most sad funeral tunes imaginable.

The wind was dying out and the rain had ceased. On the eastern mountain tops a faint rose tint was visible. Another hour of monotonous watching, and then for a nice warm breakfast beside the camp fire.

The cook's fire sent showers of sparks aloft. One by one the cattle stirred, rose, and commenced to graze.

Some time later he looked up and saw two riders break away from the group of horses at the camp and he decided that it must be time for breakfast so he informed the other rider that "chow" was ready and that they had might as well go "scoff".

"All right, 'Bow'," was the only reply as the other's horse broke into a run for camp.

The horse expecting the usual race started out on a fast canter toward the camp and when he stopped, rather suddenly, brother "Bow" found himself on the ground a few feet in front of the horse and not far from a large black snake, which he did not notice until it had stung him in the calf of the leg.

Upon realizing what had happened he caught the horse, mounted, wheeled and rode furiously to the camp.

Pulling up with a jerk that almost lifted the iron jawed bronco from the ground, he literally hurled himself from the saddle and reached the "boss" in two bounds.

"I must be in Denver to-night! I want your best horse quick!"

The "boss" stared at him in astonishment.

Why man it's a hundred and twenty miles! You're crazy."

"It's only sixty miles to Empire," cried Bow, "and I can get the train there. It leaves at one o'clock, and I can make it if you will lend me Star. I know he's your pet horse and you never let any one ride him, but I tell you, Mr. Coberly, this means everything to me.

Coberly scowled.

"You ought 'o know, Bow, that I won't lend Star; so what's the use of asking? What in thunder's the matter with you, that you're in such a confounded rush?"

Bow showed him the bite and explained the matter a little.

"Why didn't you show me this at first, you bloomin' idiot? O' course you can have the horse. Hi there! Some o' you boys round up the horses an' rope Star for Bow. Jump lively!"

The men made a rush for their saddles and in an incredibly short time several of them were racing across the plain in the direction of the horses. Bow made a dive into the tent and wrapped a rag around his leg. Coberly plunged around outside giving orders at the top of his voice.

"Roll up some grub for Bow quick! Nick, you get his canteen an' fill it out o' my jug! Fly around now!"

A rush of hoofs announced the arrival of the horse and his escort, just as Bow emerged from the tent. A dozen hands made quick work of saddling, and Bow swung up and astride of the magnificent animal, and was off on his long ride. He looked back and saw the boys in a group around the "Boss" who was explaining the cause of the hasty departure.

Presently a tremendous yell reached his ears and he saw hats frantically thrown in the air. He waved his hand in reply and settled down in the saddle.

The long, pacing stride of Coberly's pet covered the ground in a surprising manner, and eight o'clock found twenty-three miles behind his nimble feet and the Bar Triangle Ranch in sight.

A five minute stop, and then on across the rising country to the stage station at the foot of the great Continental Divide, fifteen miles away.

It lacked fifteen minutes of ten o'clock when Bow drew rein in the shadow of the giant peaks that towered above him. He unsaddled and turned loose the big thoroughbred in the corral. A half hour's rest would put new life into him. Twenty-three miles to the railroad and nearly three hours to make it. It seemed possible but the great range had to be crossed, and Bow knew that the ten miles to the snowy summit was nearly twice that distance on the flat plain.

At a quarter past ten, Star, refreshed by an energetic rubbing, and a mouthful of water, was carrying him up the road, with no apparent diminution of power. Up, up, they went, mile after mile, until the plain they had left was spread out behind them like a map, and the thick forest had given place to a staggering and scrubby growth of pines.

They were nearing the timber line, and the piercing chill of the biting wind testified to the close proximity of the snow-covered peaks. Two miles from the top Bow dismounted and led his panting horse along the icy trail.

The rarified air seemed to burn his lungs as he struggled up the remaining distance to the summit of the pass, twelve thousand feet above the sea.

Twelve o'clock! He stopped and anxiously examined the noble beast that had carried him so far and so well.

The inspection reassured him. There was plenty of life and energy in Star yet. Not without reason was he acknowledged the best horse in the country. One hour more, and twelve miles yet to go, the first seven down the steepest road in the state. Could he make it? He must! A final pull at the cinches and Bow was again in the saddle, racing down the dangerous path to the sea of dark green forest that stretched far below.

Down sharp pitches and long slopes, around dizzy curves and through deep canons, slipping, swaying, followed by masses of loose stone and gravel, they went, faster than the trail was ever covered before. The iron-shod hoofs struck fire from the flinty rocks, as almost sitting on his haunches Star would slide twenty feet at a time down an unusually steep grade, recovering his footing with a staggering effort at the bottom. It was perilous work. They reached timber line, passed below it and plunged into the woods. A mile beyond they flew past the stage at a mad pace, throwing a shower of mud over the astonished passengers.

Down to the level road they came at last, with five miles still to go. Star swung into a strong and easy lope while his rider drew a long and easy breath. Not till then had he realized the strain of that wild ride.

Rounding a turn in the road, he espied a horseman approaching, and turned out to pass him. The stranger eyed him sharply as he approached him, and suddenly whipped out a six-gun.

"Hold up there! I want to talk to you!"

For a moment Bow considered the chance of riding over the man, but for a minute only.

"I suppose you want my money," he snarled. "Well your'e welcome to it if you will leave me enough to pay my fare to Denver."

The other grimed.

"That's a good bluff, but it won't go, I'm the sheriff an' I want to know where you're goin' with Joe Coberley's horse."

"Oh is that all you want?" said Bow, relieved. "Why I've been workin' for Coberley, and he let me take the horse to ride over here to catch the train." And he gathered the reins to ride on.

"Look here, Sheriff, I'm telling you the God's truth. Coberley let me have the horse because it was the only one that could get me over here in time to catch the train, and I've got to be in Denver to-night." As he was talking he pulled the bandage from his leg and he showed the wound to the sheriff as he whispered something in his ear.

"That's all right youngster. I'm sorry I stopped you. I don't blame Joe; I'd 've done the same, even if I'd had to walk myself. I hope you won't miss the train. I'll ride down to the station with you, as some of the boys might want to string you up on account of the horse—, everybody knows him."

Overjoyed at this satisfactory turn of affairs, Bow rode away, with the repentant sheriff by his side, their horses in a rapid gallop.

Mounting a rise, they saw the town before them, a mile distant. The train was at the station! Another touch of the spur, and Star stretched out into a run that gradually left the sheriff behind, well mounted though he was.

A half mile yet to go! A quarter! The black smoke began to come in heavy puffs from the funnel of the engine, and the line of cars moved slowly away from the station.

Then it was that Star showed the spirit that was in him.

The quirt fell sharply on his flank for the first time that day, and he bounded forward and swept down on the town like a whirl-wind.

As the usual crowd of train-time loafers lounged around the corner of the station, their attention was attracted by the two swiftly approaching riders, and they paused to watch the race. Presently one cried:

"Hullo, that first horse is Coberley's black, an' he's sure movin' too. The other chap ain't in it. Why it's the sheriff! An' he's after the other fellow. Horse thief, by thunder! I'll fix him!" And he reached for his hip.

The others took up the cry of "horse thief!" and when Bow flashed around the corner of the building at Star's top speed, a volley of shots greeted him, and the bullets sang around his head.

Fortunately they went wild, and before any more could be fired the sheriff rode into the crowd and roared:

"Stop shootin' yon fools. The man's all right; he's only tryin' to ketch the train." At this there was a laugh, and then a rush to the track where an unobscured view of the race could be obtained.

The road ran for a mile beside the rails, as level as a floor. The train was gathering speed with every revolution of the wheels, but Star was traveling too, and gaining at every jump. The crowd at the station danced and howled in their excitement.

"Will he make it?"

"Look at that horse hump himself."

"Gee he's movin'!"

"Hooray for the black!"

"He'll make it! He'll make it!"

Bow, with fixed eyes and jaws set, was riding desperately. Thirty feet.—The spectators in the doorway of the last car gazed breathlessly. Twenty feet—and Star straining every nerve and muscle in his body. Ten feet—and still he gained. Only five feet now! Inch by inch he crawled up. He was abreast the platform! Swerving his flying horse closer to the track Bow leaned over, grasping the railing of the car, lifted himself from the saddle, kicked his feet from the stirrups, and swung over to the steps of the car. The faint sound of a cheer reached him from the distant depot!

After calmly accepting the enthusiastic congratulations of the passengers who had watched his dramatic boarding the train, Bow dropped into a seat with a sigh of relief.

Two hours later Bow stepped out of the elevator of a large office building in Denver, with a prescription in his hand.

At the time his thoughts ran about like this: "Well I'm glad the bite of a Bullsake looks like a Rattler's but still don't feel the same."

A RUINED ROMANCE

SECOND PRIZE

Greta June Wallington

It came about in the queerest way,
That the twain should ever meet,
For he was a worldly butterfly,
And she was a rosebud sweet.

Over the garden wall he came,
On a steed of balmy air.
He singled her from her sisters all,
Was charmed by her beauty rare.

To her he seemed as a gallant knight,
In armor of glittering gold.
Her life was cheered and brightened indeed,
By the winning stories he told.

Then he spoke of love, and the soft breeze blew,
And she timidly bowed her head.
Little dreaming they in the joy of that day,
That tomorrow they both should be dead.

A selfish heedless human,
Entered the garden next day,
And picked the helpless little flower
And carried her far away.

In anguish great, the butterfly flew,
His heart was heavy with woe.
He dashed ahead, he fluttered near,
Too weak was he for the foe.

In a gloomy house across the town
He saw her day by day,
Wither, and wilt, and bow her head,
Till she finally passed away.

In misery there, he lingered near
The vase where she had died,
A ruthless hand then struck at him
Now his spirit with hers does bide.

Far away in a land of joy at last
The twain are forever free,
Where he is the king of insect folk,
And the queen of flowers is she.

A YOUTH'S MEDITATION

Paul Engle

I sat alone upon a quiet shore
And watched the steamers pass along their way;
They came; they were; they passed and were no more
I marveled at the silence of the bay.
Last night I read a warrior's tale of war,
And learned of shrieking shells and how they come,
With distant cries increasing to a roar
They burst,—and are no more. Their mission's done.
Far down the track, to-day, I spied a train;
A tiny cloud at first it seemed to me
But ah! it grew tremendous as it came;
It passed with din,—then slowly ceased to be.
Oh Lord! Of these rude scenes from worldly strife
I pray Thee, which shall symbolize my life?

Written after accidentally shooting my dog while on a hunt with him.

DON

Paul Engle

To thee, Oh Don, thou faithful friend
I raise this humble stone.
'Twas thee who did'st my life defend
When we were out alone.

In sun and rain and hail and sleet
Thou guarded well my door,
And always stood guard at my feet
When camping in the moor.

Thy presence, Don, brought peace to me,
Thine absence brought distress.
The world to me was safe and free
With thee near to caress.

And all I've won in hunt and chase
Was rightly due to thee
No beast e'er lived thou feared to face
While on the hunt with me.

And then to think 'twas mine own shell
That tore thy woolly breast.
A bullet glanced, down in the dell;
This grave bespeaks the rest.

Oh Don! As thy spirit went up
To canine heaven above,
I drank a draught from sorrow's cup
And mourned for one I love.

AN ATTEMPT AT A SONNET

Donald MacDiarmid

Author's Note—The only resemblance of this effort to a sonnet, lies in the fact that it contains fourteen lines.

Spring is a wonderful thing. Puts spirit into one and wings
Seem not so far removed. The sting
Of biting winds is gone. The mush
Of soggy footwear, in melting snow and icy slush
Is in the past. Everything is full of music. In and out
A joyous racket fills the air. No doubt
The maple oozes those sweet tears because
It loves the weather too. We pause
To gulp some ozone. The very air intoxicates.
The water fascinates me. The sun prognosticates
Warm water soon. The hobo's annual bath
Is nearly due. The cows with longing eyes, the path
To pasture view. They bawl and moo and make the welkin ring
The world is full of life, for this is Spring.

ON DIGNITY

Author's Note—Sonnet written on having a previous effort criticized for frivolity and lack of dignity.

O quality alone of men of mind
For without mind the thing is ludicrous
I know you not, Is it because I find
Too great attraction to things humorous
That trivial minds on trivial things must dwell
The thought alarms me by its weightiness.
Is human nature so much like a bell
It can't sound marred by unsympathetic touch
And I must cease to laugh forget my mirth?
O dignity you ask too much. To me
The privilege of one single laugh is worth
A thousand sighs. And so O quality
To me denied, familiar to the great;
We part and I resign me to my fate.

BALLAD OF THE SLEEPING BEAR

Helen Worth

A famine raged thruout the land,
Wisconsin's fields were bare,
Across the lake lay Michigan
With plenty and to spare.

A mother bear and her two cubs
Gazed out across the lake,
Because she could not see them starve,
She must her home forsake.

They braved the deep, With cheering words
She urged her babies on
But when the goal was nearly reached
She noticed one was gone.

Her heart was full, the danger grave,
The land not yet in sight,
And so she urged her baby on
With all her faith and might.

Just two miles more, but even so
The poor cub's strength had failed.
He sank before his mother's eyes,
Before the sun had paled.

The land of plenty lay ahead,
The mother, spent and worn,
Reached at last the lovely beach
They'd started for at morn.

How sad she gazed across the lake
Where lay her babies two.
When suddenly, from out the depths,
Twin islands came to view.

Departed spirits linger there,
So is the story told;
Two manitous, called the Sleeping Bears,
Remain there as of old.

SENIOR "A" SOCIAL HISTORY

In September 1919 a large and brilliant class entered the High School. In due time these students elected class officers and the Great Class of '23 came into full sway. It was in June 1920 that a crowd of self conscious and happy Freshmen gathered together and enjoyed a very successful picnic, chaperoned by Miss Kimmel, at Pine Lake.

The next year '23 again responded to the call of the open and gathered at Pine Lake for their Sophomore picnic. Miss Lott and Miss Kimmel consented to chaperon the "know-it-alls", for thus they had become with an additional year of knowledge. Eats, athletic contests and dancing furnished them a jolly good time.

In 1922, the class of '23 gave a banquet with the Junior A's at the Chamber of Commerce. Toasts were responded to by Alvin Neller, Grace McComb, Bob Herrmann and Thelma Stoughton of the class of '23. Elsie Reeves, Howard Dunlap, Gwendolyn Kelly of the Junior A's spoke. Herbert A. Hall acted as toastmaster. A very excellent speech was given by Mr. Rockwood.

The Juniors again held another one of their now famous '23 picnics at Pine Lake in June.

A tremendous spirit had been growing and in 1922-23 the dignified seniors gave such an account of themselves as to rank them first in accomplishments, spirit and usefulness barring no other class.

The Fall Hallowe'en Party held in the gym was a very pretty affair. Mr. Legg and Miss Wilbur acting as chaperons helped pour the cider for the spirited occasion.

Next the Senior A's were guests of '23 at a feed given in the Cafeteria. Kennard Mathews acted as toastmaster. Toasts were responded to by Bob Herrmann, Mildred Davis, Grace McComb, Thelma Stoughton, Austin Vanderslice, Katherine McNamara, Joe Foster and Maurice Davies. Miss Lott and Mr. Slaughter each gave a very fine talk. After the banquet, dancing was enjoyed in the gym.

For the Senior Day, March 23, 1923, a Grand Mardi-Gras was held. The "Senior Frolic" given in the morning proved to be the finest stage production every given for a Senior Day. Many of the talented and noteworthy seniors took part. "Arrest Me", "Madame Butterfly" and other acts, together with the music of the Waldorf-Astoria orchestra, made the plays intensely enjoyable. All the Senior Boys wore wing collars with black bow ties and the distinguishing mark of the girls was a white middy blouse with the class colors.

In the evening the imported Ocean-Side Orchestra furnished music for the dazzling Mardi-Gras. Every one was masked, wearing quaint and charming costumes. Booths, stunts and dancing and the beautiful decorations of the gym added zest to the carnival. Miss Mildred McLean was chosen the Queen of the Mardi-Gras by a committee composed of Mr. LeFurge, Mr. Hall and Mr. Legg.

The Senior Banquet was held at the Hotel Downey. Wallace Bennett presided as toastmaster. Many fine speeches were given by the guests and students. In contrast to other social gatherings a serious spirit seemed to pervade all, as if the students realized that they were about to leave their High School life to go out into the world to become workers in a larger field.

The Senior Picnic held at Pine Lake marked the conclusion of '23's social life. '23 invited the preceding class and showed them a wonderful time.

SOCIAL HISTORY OF SENIOR "B" CLASS

January 23, 1920 is the day long to be remembered on which our Senior-B class entered High School. We were not a "class" for a whole year but when we found our names on the Sophomore-B eligibility list and when we could lift our heads toward the level with the Seniors, we organized; and it was then that we might have been lost in the Social Whirl. But we stepped carefully at first and began with the Sophomore picnic at Pine Lake. Our first attempt to show class spirit was made May 28 when the hilarious group gathered at the Internurban Station and were transported to the lake for the gala occasion. We kept the boats in operation all day and after a swim, found it difficult to recognize our best friends beneath the sun burn.

This first picnic was so successful that, although we forgot ourselves for another year, at the first signs of Spring, in '22 we answered the call of warm weather with our Junior picnic, June 10. It was held at the same old place which held the same charm for everyone.

Then as the winter months rolled around, December came suggesting a Junior banquet. But the social spirit was prevailing so strongly everywhere that we failed to find an open date so it was postponed indefinitely and our enthusiasm, reserved for the Senior banquet.

All of our lagging spirit was revived when we began our Senior year in '23, working on plans for the Senior Hop. We are looking forward to a splendid party to be held sometime in May; and in June, comes our Senior picnic. But before we become too serious, with the realization that our high school days are almost over, we shall celebrate a "Senior Day" which will culminate our social history.

DEBATING

Central has been well represented in forensics this year. We are proud of our debaters for although they have had much hard luck they have been by no means unsuccessful.

The members of the affirmative team were Jack Hubbard, Charles Doyle and Austin Vander Slice. The negative members were Lee Miller, Wayland Chester and Marguerite Womer. They were all strong and forceful speakers.

The question for debate this year was,

Resolved: That the United States and Canada jointly should construct a deep water way via St. Lawrence River as proposed in the report of the international joint commission January 19, 1922.

The outlook for a winning team next year is bright. Old Central has always and, we are confident, will always produce good debaters. We hope many people will try out next year.

ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

Wilma Caranough

Alumni! Lansing High School needs you. It needs your interest, your help in directing its activities and your help in seeing that it gets what it should have.

How many members of the City Board of Education are members of the L. H. S. Alumni Association? How many are graduates of the grade schools of the City of Lansing? How many members of the City Council were graduated from Lansing schools?

L. H. S. asks that men and women with a genuine interest in Lansing schools seek office in its city government and asks the Alumni Association to support alumni in securing such positions.

Efforts are ineffective without organization.

Fifty classes with approximately 3000 members all told have been graduated from the Lansing High School without taking into account members of the Alumni body who were unable to complete the entire four year course of study. Few of these classes have kept any semblance of organization.

An excellent example of what a class reunion means to its members was shown in the banquet and meeting held at holiday time by one class which has established a record for organization and successful reunions. The majority attending were from out of town. Some arrived just in time for the banquet after having been away for years. One had been voyaging in the south seas and had visited Jamaica, where another class member lives. One who had not been home since commencement time eight years before, came directly from the train to the dinner. Greetings were received from members in Hawaii, China and Jamaica and all parts of the United States. Curiosity was rampant. Enthusiasm fairly bobbed. The meeting of old schoolmates and teachers—for the teachers are always guests—was positively refreshing. Following up their efforts the class this year is planning to provide transportation for those living in town who find it difficult to attend.

There is opportunity for efficient service and pleasure in Organization and Fraternity. L. H. S. looks to its Alumni Association for support in its activities and projects.

Organize!

The Student Benefit club, established under the direction of Miss Etta Wilbur of the faculty and sponsored by the Alumni Association, has opened a field of many opportunities for service. With a loan fund of $7,000, fifty loans have been made to date, to students in the Senior High School and graduates who wished to continue their studies in some college or university. Many of these loans have been paid, many are still out-standing. It is the aim of the Student Benefit club to increase its loan fund to $5,000 this Fiftieth Anniversary.

The Student Benefit club needs the support of the Alumni Association.

SNOWBOUND

(SENIOR "A" PLAY)

On the same night that the "Importance of Being Earnest" was staged, "Snowbound", by Miss Mary Derby, was also given.

The talent and art displayed by the entire cast showed great care in selection, as well as careful drilling on the part of Miss Derby. Ruth Winchell, was the star and Joe Foster the leading man.

The committee in charge was made up of Ruth Winchell, Chairman, Harold Throop, William Fuller, Josephine Alzner and Marguerite May. Karl Hoeflinger was the Business Manager, and H. Richard Herrmann was the Advertising Manager. Property Managers were Annabell Daschner and Helen Davis.

THE IMPORTANCE OF BEING EARNEST

(SENIOR "A" PLAY)

"The Importance of Being Earnest," by Oscar Wilde was presented by the Senior "A" Class, at the Gladmer Theater on Friday, November 17, 1922. The play presented before a full house met with hearty appreciation. Much talent and dramatic ability were displayed by all the actors.

Marvel Hodge, Alvin Neller, Marguerite May and Howard Jordan led the play. The cast, picked from the most able of the class, was as follows:

John Worthing, J. P.	- - -	Alvin Neller
Algernon Mancruff	- - -	Howard Jordan
Rev. Canon Chasuble	- - -	Paul Engle
Merriman, Butler	- - -	Harold Brooks

TAILOR MADE MAN

The dramatic ability of the Senior B class was displayed May 4th, 1923 by the decided success of "The Tailor-Made Man." John Paul Bart, a tailor's apprentice, has big hopes and ideas about running a business. By stealing a dress suit and attending a party, he gets the notice of Mr. Nathan, president of the Oceanic Shipbuilding Corporation. Mr. Nathan hearing his ideas, employs him in his office. Later to get ahead of his secretary Dr. Sonntag, who threatens to tell his whole history, he publishes his story in the newspaper and returns to the tailorshop to work. But he regains his position in the American Oceanic Shipbuilding Corporation and marries Tanya Huber the tailor's daughter.

A great deal of the success of the play was due to the splendid direction given by Miss Derby, and to the efforts of the committee in charge which consisted of: Jack DeCamp, chairman, Gladys Rath, Hugo Lundberg, Eleanor Robertson, Paul Dixon, Helen Worth, Lazell Wall, and Lee Miller Business manager, Richard Teel property manager.

CALENDAR

1922-1923

September 5

School opens to-day. Everybody hustling. Panic-stricken Sophomores.

September 14

Some football candidates still limping. Oh, that pre-school football camp.

September 23

Pattengill Memorial Stadium dedicated to-day. Lansing wins from Hillsdale in first game of season.

September 26

General assembly to-day. Attorney E. Shields spoke on debating.

October 11

First meeting of the Oracle board. Some business we'll say.

October 17

General assembly to-day. Fine program by the Lansing Conservatory of Music.

October 21

Senior "B" informal party. Oh Boy! the cider! and the stunts! and the music!

November 3

Wanted: A Sherlock Holmes to solve mystery how Stub Wall ever cut a wisdom tooth to-day.

November 10

Faculty banqueted at Hotel Downey to-night. I wonder what on? (Seniors?)

November 13

Seniors show ignorance on intelligence test to-day. Would they even show intelligence on an ignorance test?

November 30

Thanksgiving vacation starts to-day. Wallace Bennett cried because there wasn't any snow to ride to grandma's on.

December 4

School wheels start rolling again. Football men banqueted by Merchants. Feed the Brutes! ! !

December 16

Holiday vacation begins. Mr. Legg explains to the Seniors all about Santa Claus. Bud Brown cries because he has been a bad boy.

January 2

School reopens. Marvel Hodge got a teddy bear from Santa Claus.

January 5

General assembly 3rd hour. Mr. Frederick Libby spoke on Peace.

January 8

General assembly; football men presented with letters. Oh! what magic have those "L's".

January 10

Everybody (?) returned to school after being vaccinated. Many "Ouches".

January 15

Zodiacs given out. Everybody busy reading 'em. As a stimulant for school spirit the Zodiac leads.

January 18

Joe Foster presided over class meeting to-day in a solemn, straight-faced serious manner.

January 21

Baccalaureate services held at the Plymouth Congregational Church. Of course we were sorry to see them go, but nevertheless they were terribly conceited. No one else had a chance to show what was in him.

January 22

"Exams", the fate of many people started to-day.

January 25

Senior A's banqueted by Senior B's. How they ate! Dancing followed the "feed".

January 26

Graduation exercises held at Prudden auditorium. The rest of us had our cards marked.

January 29

Many of us started school again. One half of the grade advanced. Familiar faces of Seniors are missing.

February 8

Everybody working hard. (Something to mention.)

February 22

Birthday of George Washington and "Bear" Boughton.

March 20

General Assembly. Sophomore "B's" were granted permission to attend.

March 23

Big Senior Play to-day. Between "Bum Bob" and "Destitute Dick", "Adorable Ann", and "Merry Marguerite", "Lawful Lyman" and "Daring Dyer", the play was a great success. "Bountiful Butterfly" shocked the Great White Way. In truth the plays and vaudeville stuff were the finest ever displayed.

At night the magnificent Mardi Gras was staged. Mildred McLean '24 was chosen the Queen. A fierce "slugging" match was held between "Brute" Gettle and "Kid" Lewis. "Stub" and "Joe" presented a clever pirate scene.

"All's well that ends well," said the Grouch.

April 1

Birthday of Howard Eager and Charles Doyle.

April 1-7

Vacation. Hooray! (Even if it is 20 below)

April 9

Chapel for purpose of presenting basketball letters.

April 12

Cards marked. Smiles for some, curses for others.

April 17

Track men getting into condition.

April 19

Baseball team coming finely.

April 20

J-Hop—Grand time.

April 28

Shorthand and typewriting contests held to-day.

June 10

Baccalaureate Service.

June 14

Commencement Day. "We are educated."

CLASS PROPHECY

'Twas the night before Xmas 1935; Mr. and Mrs. William Noble had just settled the rest of the family for their night's rest.

"Well, before we trim the tree let's run the ouija board for a little while, suggested Beatrice.

"That's all right with me," replied Bill, producing the well-worn board. "Oh, say I see that Jerry Conrad is dancing at the Blackstone, shall we go?"

"How can we? There's no one to stay with the children, besides I'd like to see what's happened to some of our old classmates. It probably won't be true but then it will be lots of fun."

BOYS' CHAMPION BASKETBALL

The race for honors in inter-class basketball was decidedly close, the Senior B's finally succeeding in copping the pennant, with the Sophomore A's holding the runner up position, after being defeated in the championship game 14-10. The Seniors had a fast, consistent team and played a good brand of basketball in every tilt they entered. They were defeated but once, being downed by the Junior B's in the opening game.

BASEBALL

Baseball was revived this season after a suspension of three years. The revival was brought about by the enthusiastic demands of the students. With the first signs of spring came Coach Hartman's call for candidates. The turnout was exceptionally small, but a fairly well organized team was developed by the coach. The preliminary practice was greatly hampered by the extreme coldness of the weather.

Baseball was revived with the understanding that if the season was not a success, the game would be abolished in Lansing High School indefinitely, so it was sincerely hoped by the faculty and students that we might have a successful season.

SWIMMING

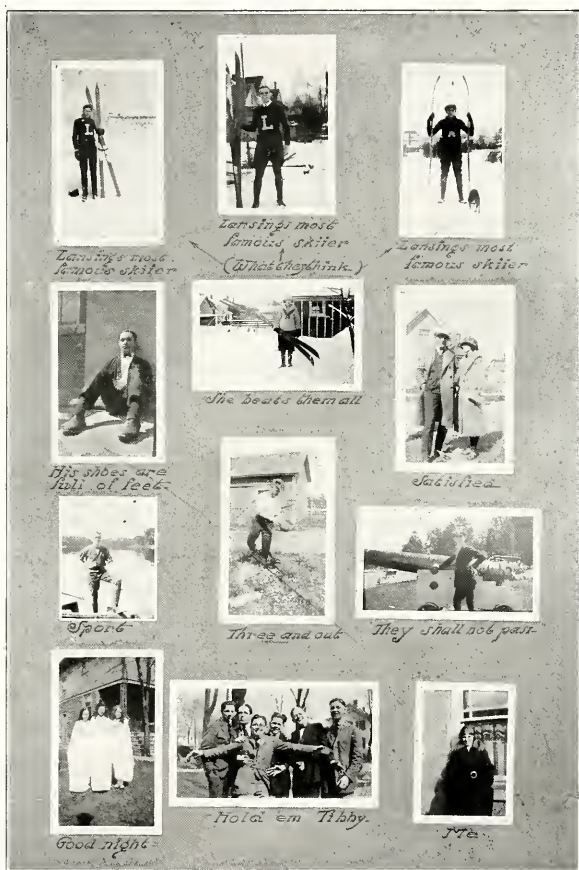

Under the able guidance of Coach Hartman an excellent swimming team was developed. The tank men entered two meets, winning both. The surprise of the season was the superiority shown by our aquatic team over the M. A. C. All Fresh. This was a thrilling meet and it was at first thought that the teams were tied for first place, but when the points were added the second time, it was found that the Lansing team came out on top by a 27-23 score.

The second meet was with Pattengill Junior High which Lansing won by such an overwhelming victory that the exact score is not known. Coach Hartman tried very hard to get meets with outside schools of the state but for some unknown reason was unable to do so. The team needs to be given a chance to show its worth in outside meets, so let us hope for a regular swimming schedule next year.

ACHIEVEMENT

The goal of every ambitious man and firm is typified in the rapid growth of the John & Ollier Engraving Company—the universal esteem in which their art and plates are held by the large national advertisers—and the enviable reputation for prompt deliveries which they enjoy.

Delivering this same high quality and careful personal supervision to schools has built up for us the largest college and high school annual engraving business in America—400 books yearly.

Thirty thousand square feet of floor space (4 floors) and over two hundred and fifty skilled employees are required to meet the constant demand for "J&O" commercial photographs, art, color process plates and photo engraving (one complete floor is devoted to color process work).

Intelligent supervision of all work by many skillful office service men eliminates your troubles. Sales service men sent everywhere.

A Graduation Gift

A most appropriate way of remembering your friend about to graduate is to present Bank Accounts as graduation gifts.

A gift of this kind almost invariably develops and strengthens the good habit of systematic thrift and economy.

The City National Bank pays 4 per cent compound interest on Savings.

THE SURE WAY TO SUCCESS FOR THE CLASS OF 1923

You may not like to admit your failures to others, but you do well to admit them to yourself.

Success will overcome failures, if you have the will power to do what you know is right. No matter what others say.
